Born to run

The Ethiopian runner, Haile Gebreselassie, is probably the greatest athlete of all time. He has won two Olympic titles, seven world titles and has broken many world records at 5,000 and 10,000 metres.

Haile's routine has not changed since he became an athlete. Every morning he gets up at 5.45 and runs for two hours. He sleeps a while after lunch and then goes out running again.

He was brought up in a very poor family. Although today he is a multi-millionaire he has never been comfortable with being a rich man in such a poor country. In the future, when he retires from athletics, Haile may go into politics. 'I want to do something to help the people of Ethiopia. I have travelled to many countries. I have experience and I want to share that.' What he can't understand is why Europe is so rich and Ethiopia so poor. 'I was in Germany a week ago and it was freezing! Minus five. We have a much better climate. But we don't have enough water and so we don't have enough food and there are too many people.'
